

ONLINE PROGRAMS	Earn your degree while you earn a living.			Get Started >
 University of Phoenix Thinking ahead.	Associate's Degree	Bachelor's Degree	Master's Degree	Doctoral Degree
	Business	Nursing	Criminal Justice	Technology

Powered by  Clickabi

SAVE THIS | EMAIL THIS | Close

Town puts price on cats' heads

- Story Highlights
- Randolph, Iowa, offers people $5 bounty to live-trap feral cats
- Captured cats will be checked by vet, offered for adoption
- After unspecified time, those not adopted will be euthanized
- Money should go instead to an expert, Humane Society spokesman suggests

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) -- Attention, cat haters: There's money to be made in Randolph, Iowa, which is offering a $5 bounty for each feral feline turned in -- alive.

Those not claimed will be destroyed.

Mayor Vance Trively says that the southwest Iowa town of 200 people is being overrun by dozens of feral cats and needed to do something.

"You can't just let them keep multiplying in town," Trively said Tuesday.  Watch stray cats stroll through yards >

Town officials approved the bounty after receiving numerous complaints, ranging from a cat attacking a small dog to a dozen cats showing up at the bowl when a resident tried to feed his own cat.

"One guy threatened to shoot all of them. I told him he couldn't do that in town. Other people talk about poisoning them, but you can't do that in town," Trively said.

Under the new policy, stray cats without collars will be taken to a veterinarian in the nearby town of Sidney -- Randolph has no vet clinic -- where they'll be kept "for a time for people to claim them," the mayor said.

If no one does, they'll be euthanized and buried.

John Snyder of the Humane Society of the United States said he doesn't have a problem with humanely killing a stray cat, but said the money spent on the bounty and the vet expenses would be better spent hiring someone who knows what he or she is doing.

"I'm concerned about children, people trying to capture these cats that don't have knowledge of what they're doing, being scratched or injured or inhumanely handling these cats for five bucks. Is it worth it?"

The mayor said several suggestions have been made, including neutering, trapping and asking for donations.

"You couldn't get a donation to save a cat in this town for the life of them," Trively said.

Since the bounty went into effect March 1, two cats -- one of them pregnant -- have been turned in.

Copyright 2008 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed.

All About Cats • Humane Society of the United States